MEMORIES for the making

Some moments just feel like magic. We still remember the joy in the room as the baby took those first few steps. We can smell cookies baking in our childhood kitchen. And we'll never forget the excitement of jumping out of bed and rushing to the want to hold on to forever—the memories our ornaments are "Part of which."

"Part of why I love what I do so much is because every ornament we design is going to represent a moment in time for someone," says Keepsake Editorial Director Lindsay Evans. "So, whether you you pull that ornament out of your storage box and hang it on in your life, every single year."

Simone Mariano, a new Keepsake artist who joined the studio in 2024, says her work has opened her eyes to the ways people "I was at my first orpass."

"I was at my first ornament signing event with another artist, Kristina Gaughran, when a collector brought in one of her ornaments from 1996 to have it signed. Just seeing that made moment whenever I'm designing—someone could be showing whether scenes—and now light and sound.

Whether you're starting a new tradition or you've been collecting ornaments for decades, we've designed our 2025 collection to help you and your family capture all the moments that made this Christmas memories.

"This year, Disney Pinocchio is celebrating its 85th anniversary, so we've added lights to make the scene glow, and I designed the wooden frame after a window in Geppetto's workshop," Gregor says. "And for Harry Potter" fans, the Hogwarts" castle features gold foil accents on the windows and torches, glowing lights and music from 'Hedwig's Theme.'"

Harry Potter

Our favorite holiday helpers, elves and reindeer, are the stars of two sweet new series from Keepsake Artists Allie Robillard and Rob Stanphill.

"In Eight Tiny Reindeer, I wanted to put my own spin on the classic characters from 'The Night Before Christmas' poem," says Allie. "Starting with Dasher, each series ornament will have a unique color palette, a jingling bell and a saddle blanket with their name. The blankets have a homemade quality, like Mrs. Claus sewed them herself. And every reindeer has a special birthmark!"

Rob's series, Welcome to Elfville, takes us into the heart of a happy holiday town filled with elves. Each ornament is actually a set of two: a full-size festive shop and a miniature shop owner. The first small business (pun intended) is Candy's Bakery.

"I imagined all the things Candy would fill her shop with. Rolling pins, oven mitts, cinnamon bread, cookies and more all found a place in the architecture," Rob says. "I'm always looking for ways to spark the imagination of kids and adults, and I'm excited to see Elfville grow with new residents, interesting buildings and fun little places to visit."

75 years of Peanuts®

Snoopy and his pals have brought happiness to fans of all ages since 1950, so we're celebrating their big milestone with our favorite form of happiness...new ornaments!

"Peanuts is a longtime partner of Hallmark, and they trust us to take Charles Schulz's beloved characters and create new favorites for fans, like I've done for this 75th anniversary ornament," says Keepsake Artist Gregor Benedetti. "I love how these stories speak to both kids and the kid in all of us."

Keepsake Artist Tammy Haddix agrees there's something magical about working on characters you've known since childhood. Together with Adan Chung, she created this year's Snoopy as The Flying Ace ornament, which features four scenes from the classic comic strip and music from "Snoopy vs. The Red Baron" performed by The Royal Guardsmen, just like in the TV special.

"I want anyone who sees my ornaments to go 'Aww!" Tammy says. "I hope Snoopy fans love it."
